

Teampainting

Teampainting is a laid back activity allowing participants to explore their creative sides. Participants are divided into groups where each group gets a canvas, easel with brushes and colors aswell as protective aprons. Thereafter, a theme is interpreted by the various groups in their own way. The actual painting is in progress for about 1 hour until they are ready to be presented during a vernissage. After some mingling, and perhaps a winning team appointed, we provide a brief description of the "psychology of colors". A fun description of the personalities behind the various colors, ie, what the color red says about the person who chose it.
